

NEW WALL STREET JOURNAL RADIO NETWORK SHOW
“THE DAILY WRAP” SET TO DEBUT APRIL 4

NEW YORK (March 10, 2011) The Wall Street Journal Radio Network announced today that its new evening talk show, “The Daily Wrap with Michael Castner,” will debut on Monday, April 4, from 6:00 to 9:00 pm ET.

The three-hour show, hosted by journalist and radio personality Michael Castner, will offer a lively look at the day’s major news stories and issues, featuring marquee newsmakers and Wall Street Journal reporters, editors and opinion writers.

“Reaction to our plans for The Daily Wrap has been extremely positive,” said Nancy Abramson executive director of The Wall Street Journal Radio Network. “Radio programmers are telling us listeners are ready for smart, humorous, civilized talk – especially at the end of the work day.”

In addition, Westwood One, long-time business partner with The Wall Street Journal Radio Network, will represent the Journal’s advertising efforts for new show.

“The Journal is creating a lot of buzz right now with The Daily Wrap,” said Stephen D. Chessare, senior vice president of sales, Westwood One. “This is a perfect early-evening position for advertisers seeking a blue chip national audience. With The Daily Wrap, advertisers know that their message will be heard in a positive and quality environment. It’s a huge advantage.”

Westwood One serves more than 5,000 radio stations with sports, music, talk and entertainment programs.
